RESOLUTION

New Delhi, the 27th October 1952

Nc. SV-44(9).—The Government of India have considered the report of the Ghee Adulteration Committee, appointed under their Resolution No. SV-44(9), dated the 19th May, 1951. The report is hereby released for general information. The findings of the Committee on the specific items referred to it for enquiry together with Government of India's comments thereon are stated below:—

1. Latent Colourisation of Vanaspati.—Under the Vegetable Oil Products Control Order incorporation of sesame oil in vanaspati is compulsory so that the product gives the Baudouin test, which is a distinctive test for the presence of sesame oil. The Committee has recommended that Government should ensure by Law that every lot of vanaspati produced in a factory, should be accompanied by a certificate that it gives the Baudouin test. It has also suggested that efforts should be made to make extensive use of this test and municipalities and other bodies should be asked to use this test for detecting adulteration of ghee with vanaspati.

This recommendation of the Committee is acceptable to Government and necessary action to enforce this suggestion will be taken under the Vegetable Oil Products Control Order.

2. Visible Colour for Vanaspati. The Committee has stated that the addition of sesame oil, although it has served the purpose to some extent, has not been found useful for the detection of adulterated ghee by the ordinary consumer who would have no laboratory facilities. The Committee has, therefore, recommended that all vanaspati produced in the country should be coloured orange by using carotene oil concentrate as colouring medium in addition to the incorporation of sesame oil. The Committee has admitted that this may not eliminate adulteration of ghee with vanaspati altogether but will minimise it to a considerable extent.

The recommendation of the Committee is not unanimous. Minutes of dissent have been recorded by Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava and Dr. Patvardhan. As it has been proved that vanaspati is not injurious to health, Government cannot contemplate imposing a ban on the manufacture and import of vanaspati. Nor can the Government at this stage embark upon compulsory colourisation of vanaspati with carotene oil concentrate as the colour imparted by carotene oil concentrate to vanaspati is of an unstable nature and will disappear when vanaspati is heated or is kept even without heating for some months. Carotene oil concentrate is not produced in India and its import will cost about Rs. 1 crore annually in dollars. Moreover, the Committee has stated nothing about the depth of the carotene colour which should be given to vanaspati. They have left this point for the decision of the Government and this will inevitably mean the conduct of further experiments. It is, therefore, considered necessary to wait for the results of the various experiments which are being carried on in India for finding out a more suitable colouring medium for vanaspati.

3. Fortification of Vanaspati with Synthetic Vitamin 'A'.—The Committee has also recommended that vanaspati should be fortified with synthetic vitamin 'A' so that its nutritive value could be increased. They have, however, stated that the degree of potency of vitamin 'A' should be fixed by Government.

This recommendation of the Committee is accepted by Government and necessary action to enforce this suggestion will be taken under the Vegetable Oil Products Control Order.

2. Government wish to thank Shri Thirumal Rao and members of the Committee for the exhaustive survey of the question referred to them and their valuable suggestions on a highly controversial matter.
